Space Requirements

Figuring out where to spray opens up a multitude of options. Weather permitting, some family members have been known to step outside, on a warm day, and spray away. Caution should be used to prevent upsetting nosey neighbors when one desires to be sprayed outside and avoid tan lines. As a general rule, an indoor setup is preferred. For family and close friends only, a shower/bath stall is an excellent spraying location. When the spraying session is complete, simply rinse the walls and you're done. A garage is also an excellent space to setup a tanning area. To prevent overspray from getting on things in the garage, hang old sheets around to catch overspray. A very nice spray booth can be constructed from PVC pipe and sheets. This booth can be quickly setup and taken down and would be ideal for

Family Use

The first option is a setup for family use. This option would include equipment and solution necessary for individuals in a family to give each other a spray tan whenever they wanted. Depending on the number of family members that wanted a tan, the amount of tanning solution purchased would vary. Some families could easily purchase a gallon while others would be interested in smaller quantities.

Family Use & Extra Income

The second option is a setup for family use along with a desire to pocket a little extra cash. This option would include equipment and solution necessary for family members to give each other a spray tan along with the option of inviting friends and neighbors over once a week for a tan. A nominal fee could be charged to help cover the cost of the solution and to also put a little extra cash in your pocket. If you sprayed 10 people a week for only $10.00 each, that would make you an $80.00 profit for about an hour of work. Not bad for a Saturday morning.

Equipment Options

Equipment options would also vary depending on the anticipated usage. Spray equipment can vary from a simple hand pump spray bottle to the same system used by the professional salons. Families with a DIY type flair may already have a compressor and sprayer that would do an excellent job of spraying tanning solution.

If you currently have nothing available to get started spraying, for simple family use, a hand pump spray bottle would be the cheapest option. This application technique generally applies too much tanning solution with each pull of the trigger and requires extra time to rub the solution into the skin. The best option would be a low cost HVLP sprayer. These sprayers can also be loaded up with real paint and spray anything from furniture to walls. As a note, make sure you clean the gun thoroughly after spraying paint before spraying your friends and family. That could be a real disaster.

If you have spray equipment already around the house, feel free to use it. It may take a few adjustments to get the right coverage, but it's an option that has been used successfully by a lot of people. This type of equipment would include compressed air spray guns or an artist airbrush.
